INTRODUCTION

DURING the last seventy years the National Portrait Gallery, unassisted by any endowment, and by few important bequests of pictures, has become unrivalled of its kind. The epochs of Holbein and Van Dyck are more splendidly illustrated in the Royal Collections and some superb groups of portraits still remain in a few famous houses, but nowhere except in the National Portrait Gallery can the great personalities of English History, from the time of Robert Duke of Normandy to our own day, be viewed in one long chronological sequence.

ARRANGEMENT OF THE COLLECTIONS.—Until the projected extension of the Gallery is realized, want of space constantly renders it necessary to change the position of individual pictures to make room for new acquisitions. Exact reference to places is therefore impossible in the Catalogue, but the visitor will have little difficulty in finding any work if he bears in mind the following general principles:—

1. Electrotpe casts from the early royal effigies are placed in the clerestory arches at the top of the main staircase.
2. The TOP FLOOR contains the principal portraits from Tudor times (Room I) to the end of the eighteenth century (Room XII).
3. The less important and duplicate portraits are hung in the REFERENCE SECTION on the FIRST FLOOR.
4. The EAST WING contains the nineteenth century portraits arranged thus:—
 - (a) on the UPPER FLOOR (Rooms XXV, XXVI and XXVII) men of letters and of science—artists, composers, actors, etc.
 - (b) on the LOWER FLOOR (known as the SCULPTURE GALLERY) (Rooms XXXII, XXXIII and XXXIV)—statesmen, soldiers and sailors.
5. The GROUND FLOOR (Rooms XXVIII, XXIX and XXX) is devoted to MINIATURES and DRAWINGS, and LANDING (XXXI) to modern military commanders.
6. The large groups and the Collection of Arctic Explorers are placed in the BASEMENT (Rooms XXXV and XXXVI).

SPECIAL FEATURES OF THE COLLECTIONS.—The visitor is recommended to ascend at once to the TOP FLOOR of the building, where the chronological series begins with the electrotpe casts in the clerestory arches. In Room I he will find a remarkable set of portraits of the great historical personages of the Tudor epoch. Those of Margaret Beaufort, Henry VII, Lady Jane Grey, Sir Thomas Gresham, Henry VIII, Mary I, Archbishops Warham, Heath and Cranmer, Sir Henry Lee, Queen Elizabeth, and Lord Wentworth, are notable examples of the art of the period. Room II contains portraits of Mary Queen of Scots, Shakespeare, and the early poets. The age of James I and Charles I is seen in Rooms III, IV and V. Room VI is devoted to the principal characters in the Civil War and the Commonwealth, the portrait of Cromwell, by Walker, meriting special attention. The next room (VII) is devoted to the Court of Charles II, and contains an unrivalled series of works by Lely and his contemporaries. Room VIII illustrates the period of the Revolution, and includes several fine portraits by Kneller. Rooms IX and X illustrate the first half of the Eighteenth Century; the busts of Hogarth and Colley Cibber by Roubiliac, deserve special notice. The age of Reynolds, Romney and Gainsborough is represented in Rooms XI and XII, where Chatham, Bedford, Mansfield and Impey—Wolfe, Amherst, Clive and Cornwallis—Burke, Warren Hastings, Fox and Pitt—Johnson, Boswell, Gibbon and Burns—Nelson, Hood, Duncan and Keppel—and many other famous names have their place. The great feature of the EAST WING is the remarkable series of literary portraits of the Nineteenth Century in Room XXV, including many by Watts, and others by Millais and Sargent. Men of science and artists are placed in Rooms XXVI and XXVII, while in the SCULPTURE GALLERY will be found the statesmen and men of action, well represented by the work of Sir T. Lawrence. The landing adjacent to Room XXV is occupied by portraits of the Royal Family from the accession of George IV. In Rooms XXVIII, XXIX, and XXX on the GROUND FLOOR the large collection of drawings, in plumbago, water colours and crayons, by Loggan, Lutterel, Russell, Reynolds, Romney, Dance, Edridge, Wilkie, Richmond, Rossetti and others is arranged chronologically. The miniatures and medallions, shown in special cases, contain a few notable specimens, e.g., Queen Elizabeth by Hilliard, Cosway by himself; and some wax portraits by Gossett and Rouw. Some photographic illustrations of portraits in other collections will be found on screens in Room XXVIII.

HISTORY OF THE COLLECTIONS.—The National Portrait Gallery was founded in 1856, in pursuance of a motion made by Earl Stanhope, P.S.A., in the House of Lords on the 4th March, 1856.

The motion brought forward in the House of Lords received cordial support, and a resolution was passed in the following terms:—

That an humble Address be presented to Her Majesty, praying that Her Majesty will be graciously pleased to take into Her Royal Consideration the expediency of forming a Gallery of the Portraits of the most eminent Persons in British history.

The Address having been duly presented, the proposal received the full sanction of the Crown, and was carried into effect by the House of Commons, when the Government proposed a grant of 2,000*l.* for the ensuing year, which was voted by Parliament 6th June, 1856. On 2nd December of the same year a Board of Trustees was appointed. Temporary apartments for the reception of the pictures and transaction of business were provided at 29, Great George Street, Westminster. The first day of opening was the 15th January, 1859. At the close of the year 1869, when the number of portraits amounted to 288, the Collection was removed to the Long Building at South Kensington, where it remained till 1885, when it was transferred on loan to the Bethnal Green Museum. In May, 1889, William Henry Alexander, Esq., of Shipton, Andover, Hants, made an offer to H.M. Government to build a National Portrait Gallery at his own expense. The present site was accepted by Mr. Alexander, who appointed Mr. Ewan Christian to be the architect. The building was completed at a cost of 96,000*l.*, of which sum Mr. Alexander provided 80,000*l.* and H.M. Government 16,000*l.*, and was opened to the public on Saturday, April 4th, 1896.

This accommodation was found barely sufficient for the collection, then numbering 1,036 portraits. Over 1,000 additions during the past thirty years have caused a serious congestion, which can be relieved only by an extension westward on the vacant site of the old St. George Barracks—an urgent necessity to which public attention has been continuously directed. During the war, from December 1915 to October 1919, the exhibition galleries were lent as offices to the Government and the bulk of the portraits were removed for safety. Part of the building was re-opened in April 1920, and within the following year the work of rehabilitation and re-hanging was completed and the whole collection, as now arranged, made accessible.

GENERAL REGULATIONS.

The Regulations for the Admission of Students, and for permission to take Photographs in the Galleries, can be obtained by application in writing to the Secretary. No copying or photographing can be permitted in the Galleries, except under these conditions.

It is not permitted to touch the pictures, sculpture or other objects exhibited in the Galleries.

Sticks, umbrellas and parasols must be left in the Entrance Hall.

Smoking is strictly prohibited.

Dogs are on no account to be brought into the building.

Children are not admitted unless under the charge of some responsible person.

Bags and parcels are not to be brought into the building, and provisions are not to be consumed in the galleries.

The Attendants have strict injunctions to see that these rules are enforced, and that proper decorum is observed by those visiting the building.
